

Chapter 4 Exercise - 38 Ways to Strengthen Your Headline Once You Have the Basic Idea

Exercise and Application

Choose at least three of the variation patterns listed on the previous pages.

List the patterns you selected on the worksheets below.

Next, write five headlines for your product that follow the patterns you've selected.

The goal with this exercise is to stretch your creativity by practicing new ways of talking about your product.

If you don't yet have a product or service, that's ok. Instead, choose someone else's product that is currently being sold in the market and go through the exercise that product.

If you are a freelancer, you might pick the product of a potential client. You may discover something new from this exercise that you'll want to share with your prospective client.
